The Gear You Need

Commuter Style

2 of 2

Johnston & Murphy | $250

• Walking from home to train station, station to work, and back again wears on your feet. Rubber soles offer needed support and provide grip on slick city streets.

Club Monaco | $79

• How to keep your hands warm without being mistaken for a hockey player.

Shure SE102MPA | $100

• Travel headphones should fit in your ears, not over them. And please, keep your music at a volume for your listening pleasure alone—no one asked you to play commuter DJ.

Bodum | $10

• Think about all the money you're spending on bad coffee when you could brew a better cup at home. This lightweight French press is made of insulated plastic, which protects your hands from the heat while keeping your coffee warm.

HATS, FROM TOP:

Marc Jacobs | $495

• Nothing like a $500 cashmere hat to warm your head and the cockles of your heart. Just don't leave it on the train.

Steven Alan | $98

• Like the scarf on the previous page, a striped knit cap can add a shot of much needed color.

SIGG | $22

• You don't have to be a tree hugger to know that plastic bottles are a waste of resources. This Swiss-made aluminum jug is lighter than a Nalgene and keeps your water tasting less like plastic and more like water.
